

The Four Gospels Combined

(All scriptures from the Concordant Literal New Testament)

I have seen a number of notes showing the combination of the four Gospels. But I have never been impressed with these notes. They have made a number of assumptions concerning the order of events which cannot be proven from scripture.

Therefore, in this combination of the Gospels, I will not make any assumptions as to the order of events when this order cannot be justified by the passage. You will see that I have used multiple columns when several events are occurring in different Gospels, and the order cannot be established.

Additionally there is one other problem. In my study before compiling these notes I have found that there are clearly two passages in Matthew that are out of chronological order. The passages are: 8:5-13; and 9:18-11:30. Matthew is the only Gospel in which this is so. I have used bracket [] to designate these passages.

I have also put in all caps Jesus movements in order to follow Him as He travels.
